VOLUNTEER

Magazine Serves as Showhouse Guide

Hillside Magazine is a color publication that serves to guide visitors through the history, architecture, design, and creativity on display in the Julian Price Designer Showhouse. Visitors touring Hillside will receive one copy of the 56-page Magazine that features illustrations representing the designers' initial visions for their spaces.

Advertisers in the magazine serve as a resource guide for special services in the community related to historic preservation, historic home sales, design, and construction. Additional magazines may be purchased in the Hillside Boutique for $5.

Development Fund Passes Milestones

Ten years ago, the Preservation Greensboro Development Fund found new footing. Since that time, the Fund has been involved in a series of notable projects ranging from relocating bungalows, rescuing fire-damaged houses, and reviving a nineteenth century saloon. In doing so, it has forged creative partnerships with neighborhoods, local governments, private foundations, businesses, individuals, and UNCG.

East White Oak Partnerships

Much thanks to PGI Board Member Sunny Gravely, Alice Drake and the board of the East White Oak Community Center, David Hoggard and the fine folks at Double Hung Windows, and the Window Preservation Alliance for their partnership in the restoration of the historic wooden windows of the East White Oak School. Constructed in 1916 to serve first, second, third, fourth, and fifth grade children of African American mill workers at the nearby Cone White Oak mill. The building is owned by a small nonprofit established in 1956 to preserve the structure and today it serves the low-income community surrounding the site. Today's restoration helps to start that preservation initiative. Thanks to all involved!

Modernism Features in Old Guilford

Brise-soleil, (in French "sun block") is a structural baffle outside the windows of a building, or apart from the entire façade of a building. During the 1960s, brise-soleil were frequently used on modernist structures in areas with warm climates in order to block solar heat gain.

An excellent example of a brise-soleil in Guilford County can be found at the High Point YWCA at 112 Gatewood Avenue. Designed by High Point architect Leon Schute, who secured many institutional projects in the city, the building gives the appearance of being a one-story slab floating just above the site, with its western end cantilevered over an automobile access point and driveway. The south façade of the flat-roofed structure is veiled by a cast concrete brise-soleil, a device popularized by Edward Durrell Stone. Behind the screen are turquoise-colored spandrels topped by large plate-glass windows that permit filtered light inside the building. The design articulates New Formalist architecture and represents a full expression of modernist design in Guilford County.

PGI Seeks Staff Position

If you are looking for a new job that makes a difference, we are looking for you! The Community Outreach Director is a new position at Preservation Greensboro responsible for strengthening the organization's relationship to the community through membership development, event planning, and fundraising development. This is a full-time staff position. The Community Outreach Director will work with the Executive Director and other staff to plan, implement, direct, and track membership, outreach, and fundraising activities related to Preservation Greensboro as a financially stable and community-engaged institution. The Community Outreach Director is responsible for individual, corporate, foundation, and government fundraising. This staff person will dedicate specific focus to implementation of a capital fund drive for major preservation projects (including capital campaign) as well as annual and planned giving programs. The position is expected to utilize the full range of collaboration available to meet prescribed benchmarks, including the Board members, Committee chairs, Executive Director, and volunteers for fundraising initiatives and events.

Restore!

Elm Street House Available for Restoration

Constructed in 1913, the Leak House is located at 909 N. Elm Street in the heart of Fisher Park. It was acquired in February 2017 by the Preservation Greensboro Development Fund (PGDF). The PGDF is seeking a buyer for the 4,000 square foot property who will complete an historic rehabilitation. The asking price is $295,000. The property will be sold subject to a rehabilitation agreement and a preservation easement to ensure that the structure and its distinctive features are returned to good condition and remain for future generations to enjoy.

Interested parties may request an information packet that contains an application form to be completed and submitted to the PGDF as potential purchasers of the property.
