

The Preservation Magazine of Greensboro

May is National Preservation Month

Established in 1973 by the National Trust for Historic Preservation, this month-long celebration of preservation occurs in communities across the nation. Here in Greensboro, neighborhood walking tours are planned to promote historic places for the purpose of instilling community pride, promoting heritage tourism, and showing the social and economic benefits of historic preservation. Participate in Greensboro's annual Preservation Month celebrations by joining us on a Walking Tour!

Hillside Guide

The Julian Price Designer Showhouse at Hillside in Fisher Park has been extended by one week in order to allow attendees from around the region to visit. See the information posted below to help you plan your visit...or re-visit!

Welcome to Hillside!

Open though Sunday May 6th
Admission is $35

The historic Julian Price home is presented as a Designer Showhouse to explore architecture, history, creativity, and design. Tickets to explore Hillside are sold in two-hour time brackets. Visitors will be provided an issue of Hillside Magazine to assist in self-guided tours of the property. Docents will be on hand to provide additional guidance to tour-goers. The house showcases designers from as far away as New York and Texas...and as close as the UNCG Department of Interior Architecture. Come explore this project before these amazing interiors are dismantled.

We Need You!

Passing of Former PGI President

It is with heavy hearts that we inform our preservation family that former PGI Board President Anne Bowers passed away on April 20 after a brief illness from the reoccurrence of cancer. Anne was our organization's president from 2012-2013, the chair of our 50th anniversary gala, and recently had a major role in our Hillside Designer Showhouse as Event Chair. Anne participated in our Palm Springs Modernism Week tour as recently as February was always enthusiastic about preservation, her home neighborhood of Fisher Park, and gardens.

In honor of Anne's service to community preservation and her lifelong love of learning, Preservation Greensboro is initiating a fund to support student internships. The Anne Stuart Bowers Study Fund will provide a stipend for students interning with Preservation Greensboro in the studies of architecture, decorative arts, history, and historic landscapes. Donations marked for this use will be directed to this fund.

A memorial service will be held at the Blandwood Carriage House from 3pm-5pm on Saturday, May 12th. Participants may bring a covered-dish appetizer if they wish. All are welcome to attend and remember Anne.

Miramichi Represents Early Garden History

Many of the region's great gardens began as private rural estates that were away from the distractions and distresses of city life. Reynolda House for the Reynolds family of Winston Salem NC (1917), Cason and Virginia Callaway's garden in Pine Mountain GA (1952), and Lewis Ginter's Botanical Garden in Richmond VA (1984) are all examples of early private gardens that grew to become major public destinations.

Greensboro, Miramichi is Greensboro's own early private botanical garden with charms and character cultivated by a notable North Carolina couple, May and J. A. "Kell" Kellenberger. Begun in 1920, the estate remains a privately-owned garden and was never expanded as a public tourist destination. It represents an unusual glimpse into the earliest phases of twentieth century botanical gardens of the region.
